Wire art

Made by: Lujain Bahlas

What is Wire Art

Wire sculpture is the creation of sculpture or jewelry (sometimes called wire wrap jewelry) out of wire. Wire is a very versatile medium for artwork. It can be braided, twisted, tied, wrapped, wound around other wires, or woven into a loose or tight mesh. Sculptors use it to create small, delicate works or large installations that can take up whole rooms. Some artists also make wire sculptures for outdoor spaces. Drotárstvo, wire craft and art refers to the technique of manufacturing using wire. In the 19th century, the practice became an autonomous craft, and since the 20th century, wire craftspeople have used wire to produce tools for daily use and art objects.

Who Found Wire Art

The first artist who brought wire sculpture art to people's attention was Alexander Calder (1898-1976), who made a series of wire sculptures in the 1920s after he'd used wire to experiment with jewelry making.
